

ASICS named to CDP Climate Change "A List" for the second consecutive year

[December 11th, 2025 – KOBE, JAPAN] – ASICS is pleased to announce that it has received the highest rating "A" in the climate change category, by the international non-profit organization CDP* for the second consecutive year.

This recognition as a "Climate A List" company reflects recognition of our continued commitment to placing sustainability—particularly climate change initiatives—at the core of our management philosophy, to integrate climate-related risks and opportunities into our business strategy, and to collaborate closely with suppliers and stakeholders to try to reduce greenhouse gas emissions across the entire value chain.

Looking ahead, ASICS will continue to enhance its transparency through CDP disclosure and to advance sustainability-driven initiatives across all aspects of our business.

*About CDP

CDP is an international non-profit organization managed by a UK charitable entity, which operates a global disclosure system that enables investors, companies, states, regions, and cities to measure and manage their environmental impacts. Supported by institutional investors worldwide, CDP has become a trusted environmental evaluation body among global financial investors.

For further details on ASICS' sustainability activities, please see the company website.

URL: <http://corp.asics.com/en/csr>

- END -

